

Parsonex Capital Partners Hires Senior Vice President of Capital Markets

Parsonex Capital Partners, a sponsor of private placement offerings, has hired Chad Whatley as senior vice president of capital markets.

Whatley has spent two decades raising capital across multiple product platforms in the non-traded direct investment space. He has also worked in a management capacity, leading distribution teams and working with executives to provide distribution and marketing direction, the company said.

According to his LinkedIn page, prior to joining Parsonex, Whatley spent four years as a regional vice president at Lodging Fund REIT III by Legendary Capital. He has also held similar positions at Inland Securities Corporation, Highland Capital Management, United Realty Advisors, and AIE Fund Management, among others.

“We are extremely excited to have Chad joining the Parsonex distribution team. His industry experience and cultural fit with our team expands our ability to service our distribution partners, financial advisors and investors,” said Jonathan Miller, president and chief executive officer.

Whatley holds a bachelor’s degree in business administration from the J. Mack Robinson College of Business at Georgia State University.

Parsonex Capital Partners focuses on real estate development, qualified opportunity zones, and special situations.
